With the increasing advancement of the digital and technological era, the scholarly community is faced with new forms of how academic research is shared and accessed. The Online Scholarly Translation Collaborative Project strives to address these very issues by developing a digital, web-based platform where scholars can exchange ideas, share resources, and collaborate on translation projects. Please join us with distinguished scholars around the globe for an exploratory discussion.